Recipients should independently evaluate all investment, legal, regulatory, tax, and accounting risks before making any investment decisions. Any forward-looking statements, projections, estimates, or expectations, if any, are based on assumptions, market conditions, and prevailing trends and are subject to risks, uncertainties, and other factors that may cause actual results to differ materially.

The prices, value, income, and appreciation of the securities or financial instruments referred to herein are based on publicly available information and other sources believed to be reliable as at the time of preparation and are subject to change without notice. Certain investment vehicles may be subject to lock-in periods, which, together with mismatches between an investor's time horizon and portfolio construction, may result in liquidity constraints or periods of underperformance. Portfolios may also be exposed to concentration risk arising from allocations to specific stocks, sectors, instruments, strategies, styles, or fund managers, which may increase portfolio-level risk.

Fixed income instruments are subject to credit risk arising from an issuer's inability to meet interest or principal repayment obligations, which may result in loss of principal or yield. Such instruments are also exposed to interest rate risk, whereby increases in interest rates may lead to a decline in their market value. Certain instruments may become illiquid during periods of market-wide or issuer-specific stress, including in open-ended investment vehicles. Securities listed on stock exchanges are subject to daily price fluctuations, which may contribute to volatility in the underlying portfolio.
